GET POWER FROM WINDMILL

Device for Converting Reciprocating Motion of Mill into Rotary is Illustrated.

A device for converting a reciprocating motion of the windmill into a rotary motion is shown in the illustration.

Windmill Rod and Attachment.

trations. Drawing No. 1 shows the windmill rod at center of stroke, writes Geo. Gilbert in the Farm and Home. Two arms, b, b, are attached to the rod. It is readily seen that if the rod moves up or down the ratchet wheel will be turned in the same direction, and with this arrangement there is no dead center. Sketch No. 2 shows the arrangement of hangers, driving shaft and pulley. Bolt a, drives b, and ratchet arm c should work freely in the joints and be heavy enough to do the work without springing. This device can be easily and cheaply made and should be very useful for operating small machines. The arms and the wheel may be made of either hardwood or iron.

MEASURE WILL WEIGH GRAIN

Adjustable Receptacle Devised to Make Bushel of Larger or Smaller Size—Weight Varies.

In some sections of the country, grain is sold by the bushel of a certain number of pounds. As the weight per volume of grain sometimes varies considerably, the measure here illustrated has been provided, says the Scientific American. It consists of two sections, one of which is threaded in the other, and may be adjusted to make a bushel of larger or smaller size, according to the weight of the grain.

Planning the Farm Home.

Something of beauty, as well as of order, convenience and good sanitary conditions is needed to make a farm home attractive. A wide sweep of lawn between the house and the road, a background of trees and shrubbery, low flowering bushes planted close to the foundation and serving, as it were, to bind the house to the soil; vines over the porch or bordering the window frames—all these do much to beautify the house. From the erection of the first house, however modest, the homemaker should plan for the future as well as for today. He should avoid building too near the road, remembering that prosperity may be long enough him to build a larger home, which may often be most satisfactorily placed in front of the old one. Barns and other buildings should be located in such relation to one another as to allow for improvements which will result in a harmonious whole.

Corn Producer Wins $500.

Peter G. Davis of Granby, Mass., set a new world's record for corn of last year's production, and was given a $500 award by the New England Corn exposition judges. The record was made on one acre of land, from which Mr. Davis harvested 103½ bushels of crib dry yellow flint corn. His yield at harvest time was 127 bushels of shell-corn.

Beauty of Lawns.

A fine lawn is one of the luxuries of a country home. A naturally pretty lawn may be spoiled by too many shrubs and flowers, and by too few.

JOASH CROWNED IN JUDAH

Sunday School Lesson for April 16, 1911
Specially Arranged for This Paper

LESSON TEXT—2 Kings 11:1-20. Memory Verse 12.
GOLDEN TEXT—"Blessed are they that keep His testimonies, and that seek Him with a whole heart."—Psa. 119:2.
TIME—Athaliah came to the throne in 842 B. C. (Hastings) or 838 B. C. (Becher).
JOAH, 842 B. C. (Hastings) or 838 B. C. (Becher).
PLACE—Jerusalem, the capital of Judah.
KINGS—Joash's co-regents were Jeho in Israel, Hazael in Syria, Shalmaneser II in Assyria.

God always finds ways to frustrate the evil. John Wilkes Booth did not reckon on the flag which tangled his feet when he tried to escape. He killed a Lincoln, but up started a host of others to undo his evil deed. The kingdom of God is not a pillar which can be thrown prostrate in the dust, but a cube that always falls upon a base as broad as that from which it has been dislodged. In fact, it is rather like the Irishman's stone fence, which he built three feet high and four feet wide, so that if it was tipped over it would be higher than it was before.

How can we apply this incident to our modern boys and girls? For every one of them a kingdom is waiting, the kingdom of a noble, happy and useful manhood or womanhood. This is the real kingdom, for Joash, and for every boy and girl. Every young king and queen is surrounded by perils, as terrible as those that threatened Joash; and the only safety now is the safety that he found then—the protection of the church and of a godly home.

A noble woman has done her part in saving the young king—the part that mothers play in the preservation of the young kings of our modern homes. Now a man steps in, as the father comes to have the chief influence over the life of the growing boy. Jehoiada, the high priest, was a man of ability and fine character. Probably it was becoming increasingly difficult to hide the growing lad, and longer confinement would be most injurious for him physically and mentally. The first step toward placing him on his rightful throne was to gather a sufficient force of loyal adherents. After obtaining the assurances, in addition to their own weapons, which of course they would bear, they were furnished by Jehoiada with the spears and shields that, as relics of David's time, hung somewhere within the sacred precincts, just as his predecessor Ahimelech had furnished to David himself the sword of Goliath. These would remind them that it was for David's heir they were contending.

Wise steps were taken, under the leadership of Jehoiada, in the opening of the young king's reign. A covenant was made between the Lord and the king and the people. This was a renewal of the original compact, in which Jehovah and his people bound themselves together—a compact broken by the Baal-worship of Athaliah's reign. What was the second step? The immediate and thorough destruction of the temple of Baal, with its altars and licentious images, and the execution of its high priest Mattan. It seems to be implied that the "house of Baal" stood on the temple mount, in ostentatious rivalry with the sanctuary of Jehovah. And the third step? Jehoiada appointed officers over the house of the Lord, re-establishing the courses of the Levites, and proceeding at once to assign the custody of the temple to a particular course. And the final step? Leaving the Levites to keep order in the temple, Jehoiada and the soldiers conducted the boy king to the palace through the gate of the guard, doubtless that through which the king regularly passed from the temple to the palace and back again, accompanied by his bodyguard.

When young Solomon started out in his reign he was offered his choice of blessings, and chose not long life or riches or power, but wisdom; and in that choice he gained the other blessings also. When Christ started out in his great reign he was found in the temple, seeking wisdom. When the girl Victoria learned that she was to become queen of earth's mightiest empire she quietly said: "I will be good." If our young kings and queens would be well furnished for their sovereignty they must go to the Bible and to the Bible school, and there they will learn what true royalty is.

It is appropriate that we have for Easter Sunday the story of a coronation, for Easter is the anniversary of the greatest of all coronations, the day when all mankind received the possibility, at least, of the crown of life.

This is the crown to which all our young kings and queens should look forward as the blessed reward of noble reigning over the kingdoms that God has given them. St. James wrote: "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation; for when he hath been approved, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord promised to them that love him."

St. John was bidden to write to the church in Syria: "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee the crown of life."

The crown of life means the achievement of the best and most beautiful character. It means the development of all the powers that God has given us. It means love and friends in most satisfying abundance. It means the honor of all whose good opinion is worth the most. It means Christ's "Well done, thou good and faithful servant!" It means an eternity of happiness in heaven. All are signified by that open grave.

An esparto grass company is being formed in England to acquire the holdings of a French company which has concessions from the French government to collect and sell esparto or alfa grass from 115,000 acres in Algeria. It is chiefly used for paper making, and the United Kingdom imports about 200,000 tons per annum.

Rhode Island Reds

(Single Comb.)

My Reds are as good as the best, and better than the rest. If you wish to see what healthy, lively chicks that can be hatched from my eggs call and see the ones I have in a Philo fireless brooder. They are husky, big boned chicks that look like their only mission in life is to grow as fast as they can and they are doing it too.

If you want any eggs hatched (either from my stock or what you furnish) see me for prices.

Prices on eggs for hatching—Best pens, $2.50; second, $1.50; utility, 75c per 15. Philo coops used on my place. Visitors always welcome.

Memoir.

In loving remembrance of Mrs. Margaret Duval, who departed this life April 4, 1906:

Oh why should memory veiled with gloom,
And like a sorrowing mourner crape,
Sit weeping o'er our empty tomb,
Where captives have escaped.

'Tis but a mound and will be mowed,
When e'er the summer grass appears,
The loved, though wept, are never lost,
We only lose—our tears.
